Packing

To make camping a more organized and enjoyable experience, Cub Scouts should be encouraged to be properly equipped and they should always pack their own rucksack. Building self-sufficiency is an important part of Scouting.

Parents usually help their Cub Scouts lay out their gear and ensure that everything is there. However, they should never actually put the gear into the rucksack. The Cub Scout needs to know where something is packed so that they can find it on camp, and they may not be able to pack their gear as tightly as their parents can, leading to the usual problem of when it comes time to repack at the end of camp that not all the gear fits back into the rucksack.

Another common problem for Cub Scouts is trying to squeeze their sleeping bag back into its stuff sack. A Scouter should help perform this task otherwise the Cub Scout may try to pack the loose sleeping bag into their rucksack at the cost leaving the clothing out of the bag. Rucksacks are never waterproof, so it's recommended to put a plastic bin liner inside the rucksack.

The following are some tips on packing:

- Assemble all the items being brought on camp, on the bedroom floor, checking them off one by one as they are placed into the rucksack
- Work on the principle of 'Last In, First Out'
- Remember, it's easier to roll clothes than to fold them
- Pack a complete outfit together – pants, T-shirt, socks, underwear
- Pack the daily outfits in a plastic bag. Place the previous day's dirty outfit into the next day's plastic bag and put it back into the rucksack
- ALWAYS BRING EXTRA SOCKS
- Don't pack a bath towel if a hand towel will suffice
- Make sure that the batteries in the torch or headlight are working
- Always state that it is ok to bring a teddy or favourite soft toy if the Cub Scout usually sleeps with one
- Do not bring unnecessary outfits
- LABEL EVERYTHING INCLUDING THE RUCKSACK

Points to Note

This is an all-season list. What the Cub Scout actually brings will depend on the seasonal weather and the type of activity.

Some points to note:

- A Rucksack: 65 – 70 litre capacity is large enough for Cub Scouts
- All gear must be labelled and each Cub must be able to identify their own gear.
- Remember that the Cub Scouts must carry their own gear.
- Dishes: Cub Scouts are required to bring their own dishes to camps. A melamine or other unbreakable type plate, bowl, and mug are recommended as they are durable and will not transfer heat near as fast as enamel or metal dining kits. A knife, fork and spoon will complete the set. Keep it all stored together. (We suggest using a mesh bag for washing delicate items – available in the discount shops).

Dressing in Layers

Proper clothing is essential for keeping warm, dry, and comfortable in the cold weather. Wearing multiple layers is both warm and allows Cub Scouts to take layers off and on so that they always have enough to be warm, but not so much that they sweat. The layers should be something like this:

1. Base layers: Long sleeved T-shirts, long underwear if possible, thin socks
2. Insulation layers: Jumper or hoody, warm pants (fleece is best; track suit pants also work), heavy socks (fleece or wool)
3. Waterproof jacket, rain pants, hiking boots
4. Hat and scarf or buff, gloves or mittens

Bring extra clothes, particularly socks, to change out of wet clothing.

Personal First Aid Kit

Every Cub Scout should have their own personal First Aid kit. This kit is packed into an old pencil case or small Tupperware container. The kit does not need to be very big so that it can be packed in a day bag or rucksack for each outing.

The following are suggested items for a personal First Aid kit: a selection of different sized plasters, plastic bag, Savlon Cream, small scissors, roll of elastic bandage, surgical tape, tweezers, steri-wipes, safety pins, heel blister plasters.

Keeping Clean and Healthy on Camp

Keeping clean and hygienic will result in happy campers.

Everyone on camp should wash themselves every morning when they get up. This should be the same routine as would be practiced at home - face, hands, teeth and the combing of hair. If showers are available on the campsite, encourage to the Cub Scouts to use them.

Erect a clothes line to dry out wet towels.

Cub Scouts should have it explained why it is vital to wash their hands after going to the toilet, giving first aid or handling materials that may carry germs. Hands should be washed before and after handling food or drinking water.

It is important to keep feet healthy. Wash feet at the end of a day hiking and camping; dry them thoroughly before putting a change of shoes or boots back on. Explain to the Cubs that this will make their feet more comfortable. Shake shoes or boots and socks out to remove any stones or materials that may cause blisters.

Insist on a full change of clothes at night. Clothes worn to bed must be completely dry.

Anything worn during the day will be at least slightly damp from sweat.

Clothes and sleeping bags should also be kept as clean as possible. Cub Scouts should put on clean underwear and socks each day. Sleeping bags should be turned inside out after using it then shaken to air it.

Out and About

Outdoor Activity

As with your Scouting programme overall, it is important that there is an outdoor programme in the run-up to camp.

Organise a day activity in the out-of-doors. It may be a backwoods experience, a hiking expedition, a day on the water. The most important aspect of this activity is that Cub Scouts be given the responsibility of packing their own personal gear, as well as Group gear.

Cub Scouts can be given a checklist-style list of requirements for the outing. It is their responsibility to prepare and pack at home!

Organising an outdoor expedition is also ideal for putting into place Cub Scout-friendly plan-do-review process. Giving Sixers extra responsibilities during the outing can test their leadership skills in a safe way- they might be charged with organising the Group gear, carrying the first aid kit, etc.

The outdoor activity, whatever format it takes, should, most importantly, be FUN! Cub Scouts are gearing up for their camp- this outing is a perfect opportunity to put their skills into practice!
